Q&A

Hoda Kotb

The Today show host, 50, just launched her own SiriusXM Radio talk show

How is radio different from TV?
Our TV segments are, like, two minutes. With radio, it's an hour, so we can really get to the meat of something. Plus, I can wear my fat pants.

What's your interviewing secret?
You have to be observant and 100 percent focused on your guest but also have a conversation. That's part of the fun.

Will you be drinking on air?
I hope so. They offered me a bottle of water, and I was like, "What kind of lame place is this?" We'll work on that.

How Wendy's® preps Romaine.

How other "salad places" prep Romaine.

You'd be surprised who's cutting corners on salads. Not Wendy's. We make our salads fresh every day, starting by hand-washing and hand-prepping whole heads of Romaine in our restaurants. Some other salad places often use Romaine that's processed in a factory and shipped pre-bagged, then served in a fancy bowl with a fancy price tag. At Wendy's, we believe it's not what your salad goes into, it's what goes into your salad.

It's time to look beyond the bowl at YouTube.com/Wendys.

ALL THE NEWS & BUZZ FROM HOLLYWOOD

THE TRUTH ABOUT KATIE & JAMIE

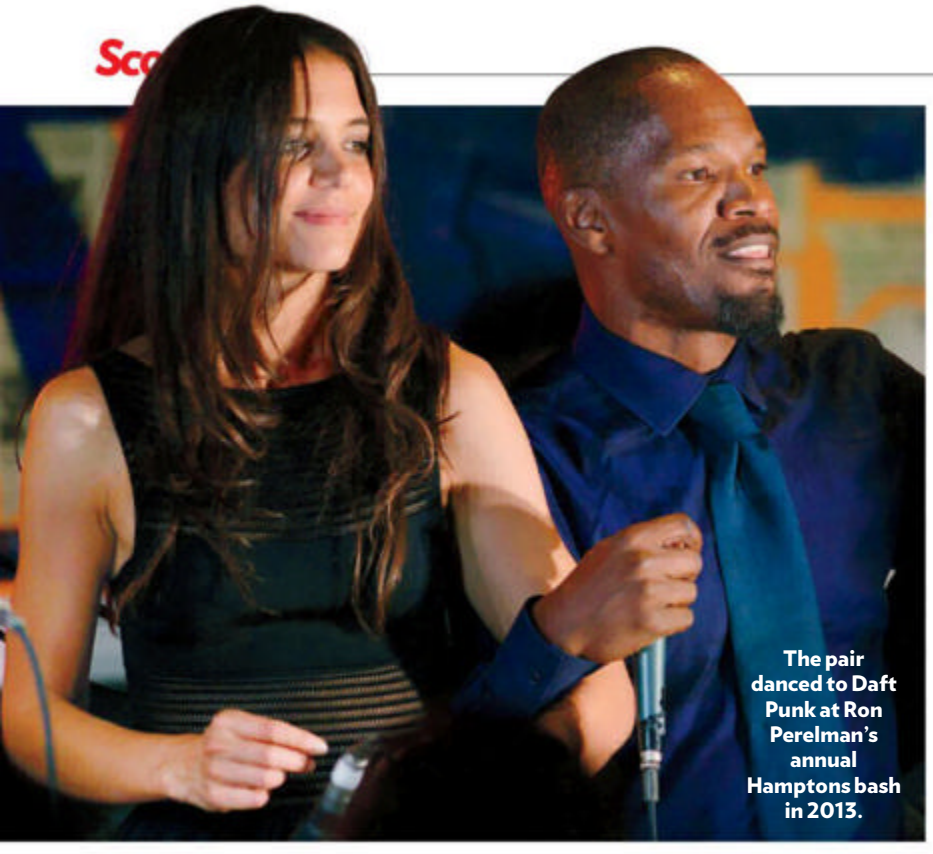

BY JEFF NELSON

WHAT EXACTLY IS going on between Katie Holmes and Jamie Foxx? Rumors have long swirled of a romance between the two stars—and now multiple sources confirm to PEOPLE that the two have indeed been spending time together for over a year . . . though it's nothing serious. "This is not some intense romance," says a source with knowledge of the situation. "Jamie and Katie are friends and have been for a long time. They are two adults who are attractive and single, and so apparently conclusions will be drawn. But contrary to those conclusions, they're not about to run off and make some →

"He has lots of close friends who are important to him. He also has family responsibilities," says a Foxx source.

serious commitment."

Since Holmes, 36, moved from New York City (where she continues to have a residence) to the Los Angeles area last summer with daughter Suri, 8, another insider says she's been spotted visiting Foxx, 47, "often" at his home a short drive away from hers, and they "spend hours together" at a time. But don't expect their quiet get-togethers to lead to more. Adds a Foxx source: "[They] see each other and go out together, but Jamie would tell you he is not involved with anyone seriously. [He]'s a workaholic and couldn't be happier in his life as it is."

The pair, of course, go way back: Foxx starred with Holmes's then-husband Tom Cruise in Collateral in 2004. Then, a year after Holmes's divorce, rumors that she and Foxx were getting cozy flew after they jumped onstage to dance at a Hamptons charity bash in August 2013. Foxx later denied they were an item, telling Entertainment Tonight, "It's quite hilarious because we simply danced at a charity event along with a lot of other people."

'THIS IS NOT SOME INTENSE ROMANCE. THEY'RE NOT ABOUT TO RUN OFF AND MAKE SOME SERIOUS COMMITMENT' —A SOURCE CLOSE TO THE SITUATION

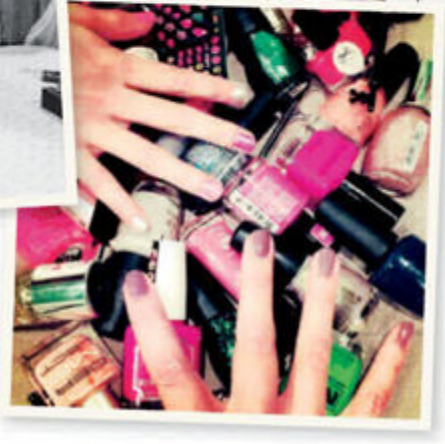

Neither Holmes nor Foxx has dated anyone publicly in recent years. Foxx—who's about to start production on two films—has notably brought his daughters Corinne, 21, and Anelise, 6, as his dates to award shows.

"I always wanted to be married, 2.5 kids, wood paneling on the side of the station wagon, but . . . you get your heart broken one good time, especially for a man, it's catastrophic," he told Oprah Winfrey in 2012. And Holmes has been focusing on raising Suri and revving up her career: She's busy filming an arc on Showtime's Ray Donovan and stars in the movies Mania Days, which just premiered at the SXSW festival in Austin, and Woman in Gold, in theaters April 3. As for a serious romance with someone eventually? Holmes told PEOPLE last November that she "absolutely" still believes in love, adding: "I'm a very loving person. Of course I'm open to finding love again."

FASHION POLICE
THE DRAMA CONTINUES

It couldn't have come at a more inconvenient time. While the E! staffers were busy celebrating their new scripted series The Royals, comedian Kathy Griffin took to Twitter to abruptly declare she had quit Fashion Police. "She knew they'd be busy," an E! source tells PEOPLE of the March 12 tweet, which came just two weeks after Kelly Osbourne announced she was leaving the show. Griffin tweeted that she no longer wants to "contribute to a culture of unattainable perfectionism and intolerance towards difference"—the last part a possible reference to cohost Giuliana Rancic's joke, which many found racially insensitive, regarding the dreadlocks 18-year-old Zendaya Coleman wore at the Oscars. "I don't really feel [Fashion Police] was my best work," Griffin told Sirius XM host Howard Stern on March 16. "I probably shouldn't have taken the gig." And she is not alone in those feelings. "Kathy was not loved," says a show insider, who adds that Griffin was "not exactly cooperative." But things could have been worse: "[The producers] actually said, 'If you want, you can clean house,'" she told Stern. "[But] I wasn't looking to put anybody out of work."

Despite the drama, E! has confirmed that the show will return with Rancic and cohost Brad Goreski. The network has declined to speculate who might fill the empty seats, but a source says there has been talk of rotating in guest hosts until permanent replacements are found.

LIFE AFTER THE BACHELOR

The Bachelor's Chris Soules went to great lengths to ensure that his new fiancée, Whitney Bischoff, was willing to live in his small hometown, but that big move to Arlington, Iowa, will have to wait. As Soules, 33, competes with dance pro Witney Carson on Dancing with the Stars, Bischoff, 29, told PEOPLE she is happy to commute from Chicago—where she works as a nurse—to Los Angeles. "I think it will be a good transition for us to start our journey together in L.A. It's just so nice to be together finally." And while they're still learning each other's quirks, Soules is clear on what he's looking forward to most: "Building a family together is probably No. 1."

'THE MOST SURPRISING THING FOR ME IS HOW FAST HE IS GROWING'
—KELLY ROWLAND

KELLY ROWLAND

MEET MY BABY BOY!

Titan Jewell Weatherspoon

BORN: Nov. 4, 2014

Given his mama's award-winning pipes, it's no surprise that Titan Jewell—the 4-month-old son of Kelly Rowland and her manager husband, Tim Weatherspoon—is already showing off his musical side. "He absolutely loves music and likes when we dance and sing with him," Rowland tells PEOPLE. "He just giggles so much." In fact, Titan's cheerful personality has helped the singer find some much-needed joy after the unexpected death of her mother last December. "When Titan laughed for the first time, I cried," says the former Destiny's Child star, 34. "It was the most beautiful sound I've ever heard." Being a new mom also made her realize that "the time for B.S. is slim to none! It's toxic, and I don't want it around my baby." Luckily the parents (who wed last year) are surrounded by their supportive extended family and friends—including former bandmates Michelle Williams (who introduced the couple) and Beyoncé. As for the inevitable sleepless nights and countless diaper changes, Rowland and Weatherspoon, 41, are tackling them as a team. "I have to say, whatever 'baby challenge' you put in front of Tim, he passes it with flying colors," says Rowland. And no doubt the proud mom—who is in the studio now working on new music—is happy to sing Titan to sleep each night. "I love putting him to bed," she says. "I've gotten so good at it!"

Dakota Meyer & Bristol Palin

ENGAGED

Bristol Palin—the daughter of former Alaska governor Sarah Palin—is set to wed former Marine and U.S. Medal of Honor recipient Sgt. Dakota Meyer, 26. "Truly the luckiest girl in the world," Bristol, 24, wrote in a March 14 Instagram post.

BABY NEWS

Actress Marla Sokoloff, 34, and her husband, composer Alec Puro, 39, welcomed their second child, Olive Mae, on March 13, Sokoloff told PEOPLE exclusively. She joins big sister Elliotte Anne, 3.

MOVING ON

Prince Harry, 30, will be leaving the British Army in June, according to a March 16 statement from his office at Kensington Palace. "I consider myself incredibly lucky to have had the chance to do some very challenging jobs and have met many fantastic people in the process," said the prince and captain, who served for 10 years.

TO THE RESCUE

While on vacation in Hawaii last month, actor Josh Brolin, 47, saved a surfer from drowning. In a video that surfaced on March 13, Brolin is seen grabbing the leash of the surfer's board before bringing him back to shore.

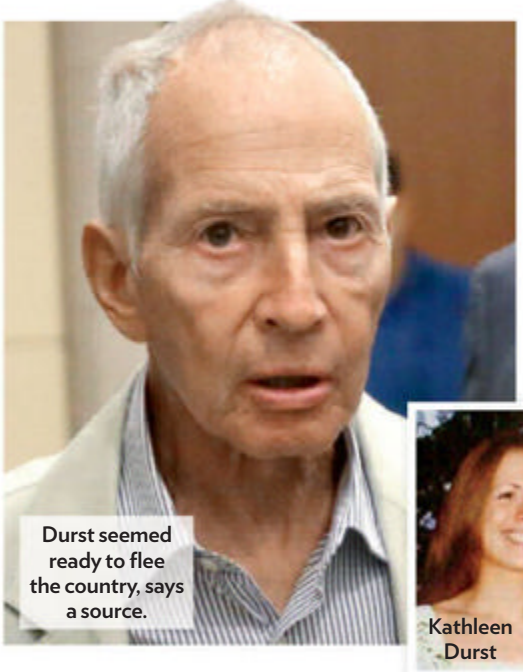

Josh Brolin

SPLIT

Dancing with the Stars pro Karina Smirnoff, 37, and actor Jason Adelman, also 37, have ended their engagement, PEOPLE confirmed on March 11. This is the dancer's third broken engagement: She was previously betrothed to Maksim Chmerkovskiy and pitcher Brad Penny.

CONTROVERSY

After gay designers Domenico Dolce and Stefano Gabbana spoke out against same-sex families in an Italian magazine, Elton John took to Instagram to call for a boycott. "I shall never wear Dolce and Gabbana ever again," wrote John, 67, who has two sons with husband

Durst seemed ready to flee the country, says a source.

Robert Durst: 'Killed Them All'

After filming a damning HBO documentary, the real estate scion was arrested for the 2000 murder of Susan Berman

At the end of his final interview for the HBO docuseries The Jinx, Robert Durst went to the bathroom, seemingly unaware that he was still mic'd up. "You're caught," he mumbled to himself. "What the hell did I do? Killed them all, of course." "It just came spilling out of him," says filmmaker Andrew Jarecki of the real estate heir, who has been suspected—but never convicted—of the 1982 disappearance of his wife, Kathleen, the 2000 shooting of friend Susan Berman and the 2001 murder of neighbor Morris Black. Producers gave a tape of the incriminating ramblings to the FBI (which had its own investigation in the works), and Durst, 71, was arrested for the Berman murder on March 14 at a New Orleans hotel. (In his possession? A fake passport, a handgun and a wad of cash.) L.A. police allege that Durst shot Berman before she could be interviewed regarding his wife's disappearance. "He was always a person of interest," says Det. Cody Cazalas. "But now everyone's hoping that justice will be served. It's about time."

Singers Slammed in 'Blurred Lines' Verdict

Robin Thicke and Pharrell Williams must pay a whopping $7.3 million

It wasn't just the lyrics that made the 2013 hit "Blurred Lines" controversial. On March 10 an L.A. jury found Robin Thicke, 38, and Pharrell Williams, 41, guilty of copyright infringement and ruled that they must pay Marvin Gaye's family $7.3 million. The family claimed that "Blurred Lines" copied the late musician's 1977 track "Got to Give It Up." In a statement, Williams's rep said they are "considering their options" as the ruling "sets a horrible precedent for music and creativity going forward."

David Furnish. Dolce has since said he was not "judging other people's choices and decisions."

CRIME

On March 15 Jeffrey I. Williams, 20, was charged in the shooting of two police officers in the embattled city of Ferguson, Mo. Officials say Williams claimed to have been aiming for other targets when he shot the officers on March 12.

DEATHS

Discworld author Terry Pratchett died at age 66 on March 12 after suffering from early-onset Alzheimer's. ● Still Alice codirector Richard Glatzer, 63—whom Julianne Moore praised in her Best Actress Oscars speech—passed away from ALS on March 10. ● Three Dog Night keyboardist Jimmy Greenspoon died on March 11 after a battle with cancer. He was 67.

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

Cindy Crawford

The model and entrepreneur helps cancer patients in the workplace

Kashuk and Crawford film a PSA.

I've been involved with the fight against cancer for a long time because my brother died of leukemia. So when one of my closest friends—makeup artist and cancer survivor Sonia Kashuk—asked me to be part of the April 15 Beauty with Benefits event on QVC, I wanted to honor what she's been through. We all use cosmetics to make ourselves feel better, and this is a way to do that while making someone else feel better too. Eighty percent of the purchase price of the donated merchandise benefits the Cosmetic Executive Women Foundation's Cancer and Careers organization. When you're a working person, how do you manage having a career while dealing with cancer? This organization helps people with everything—from how to tell their boss to what rights they have. To be able to work and maintain that sense of normalcy while going through treatment can help people handle the stuff that's out of their control.

A DOZEN COOL THINGS TO SEE, HEAR, READ AND DOWNLOAD THIS WEEK

Kyle Chandler and Linda Cardellini are siblings with secrets in a new series from the Damages team.

SAEED AYANI/NETFLIX

No. 1 Bloodline

In this gripping thriller, you can go home again—but it'll be the mistake of a lifetime

NETFLIX DRAMA Danny Rayburn (Ben Mendelsohn) is a black sheep who sets the flock baaing in distress: He's the sort of horrible relative whose name you want left out of notarized wills, erased from the family Bible and blocked in search engines on genealogical websites. But when this paper-thin, shifty-eyed prodigal returns to the idyllic Florida Keys—Ma and Pa (Sissy Spacek and Sam Shepard) run a hotel there that looks like a TripAdvisor dream—you sense the rest of the flock are the ones infested with fleas. Why do Ma's sweet glances at Pa turn into death stares? Why, in flash-forwards, do we see her other son, upstanding John (Kyle Chandler, whose solid middle-aged waist proclaims probity), carrying a limp-limbed Danny in a torrent? And whose corpse is that in the backwater? In the three episodes made available for preview, Bloodline is full of mean, sly potential. (Available for streaming March 20)

No. 2 Cop Show

WEB SERIES COMEDY Colin Quinn plays the arrogant, not very bright star of a low-budget crime show that looks like Law & Order shot on Vine. Disgusted when a script specifies that a victim had eaten blood sausage and brussels sprouts before her murder, he insists on a rewrite. The line becomes: "Stomach contents—delicious s'mores." (Now streaming at LStudio.com)

Quinn (right) interrogates a suspect (comedian Jim Norton).

Christopher Plummer, Pacino and Katarina Cas raise a glass.

No. 3 Danny Collins

Al Pacino and Annette Bening make a fizzy pair

MOVIE COMEDY/DRAMA Cross Pacino with Neil Diamond and you've got Danny Collins. The singer gets a long-lost letter from John Lennon, stirring him to connect with his son (a great Bobby Cannavale) and try for love with a hotel manager (Bening, channeling Diane Keaton). Danny gets dark, but good times never seemed so good. (March 20, R)

No. 4 Marina and the Diamonds, Froot

MUSIC POP Beloved overseas, Welsh singer-songwriter Marina and the Diamonds—yes, she's both the Marina and the Diamonds—proved a hitmaker with 2012's "How to Be a Heartbreaker." Now her third album seems poised to take her to the top stateside. Froot is packed with addictive hooks, but it's not all glittery disco pop: "Better Than That" is a grimy dismissal, while the ballad "Happy" showcases a softer side. "Good things come to those who wait," she sings on the title track—and she's right.

Marina Diamandis, better known as Marina and the Diamonds.

Dr. Brian J. Druker, famous for his research on chronic myeloid leukemia.

No. 5 Cancer: The Emperor of All Maladies

TV DOCUMENTARY This three-part history of cancer—both our understanding and our treatment of the disease—is essentially an epic medical drama, full of striking moments: The idea of carcinogens was proposed as early as 1775, when Dr. Percivall Pott concluded that soot had caused the cancer in his patients. They were chimney sweeps. (PBS, March 30, check local listings)

English singer-songwriter Bay, 24, recorded his first full album in Nashville.

No. 6 James Bay, Chaos and the Calm

MUSIC ALTERNATIVE

You'd imagine that indie idol Bay's life these days must be pretty chaotic: Since 2013 he's dropped three well-received EPs and has been touring at a furious pace—most recently with "Take Me to Church" star Hozier. But it's all been the buildup to this debut album, which ranges musically across the spectrum promised in the title: The stripped-down breakup tearjerker "Scars" begins as an acoustic ballad but reaches its crescendo in a wailing finale. "Best Fake Smile," a kiss-off song punctuated with hand claps, is guitar-driven rock. But whatever mood he's in, Bay is in control. (March 23)

LEGAL NOTICE TO U.S. RESIDENTS

If you purchased a Bosch or Siemens 27" front-loading washing machine, you may be entitled to a cash payment.

Includes: Nexxt, Vision, and ultraSense models

A Settlement has been reached in a class action lawsuit about the advertising and effectiveness of Bosch and Siemens brand 27" front-loading washing machines ("Washers"). If you are the original purchaser of a Washer you may be eligible for a cash payment of $55 from a proposed Settlement.

Who's included? The Settlement includes any U.S. residents who are original purchasers of a Washer. You do not need to still own the Washer.

What does the Settlement provide? If the Settlement is approved and becomes final, Class Members who submit a claim proving that they are the original purchaser of a Washer will receive a $55 payment from the Settlement (unless they previously received a full refund or free exchange of a Washer) and will release all claims against Bosch and Siemens (see also "What are my rights?" below).

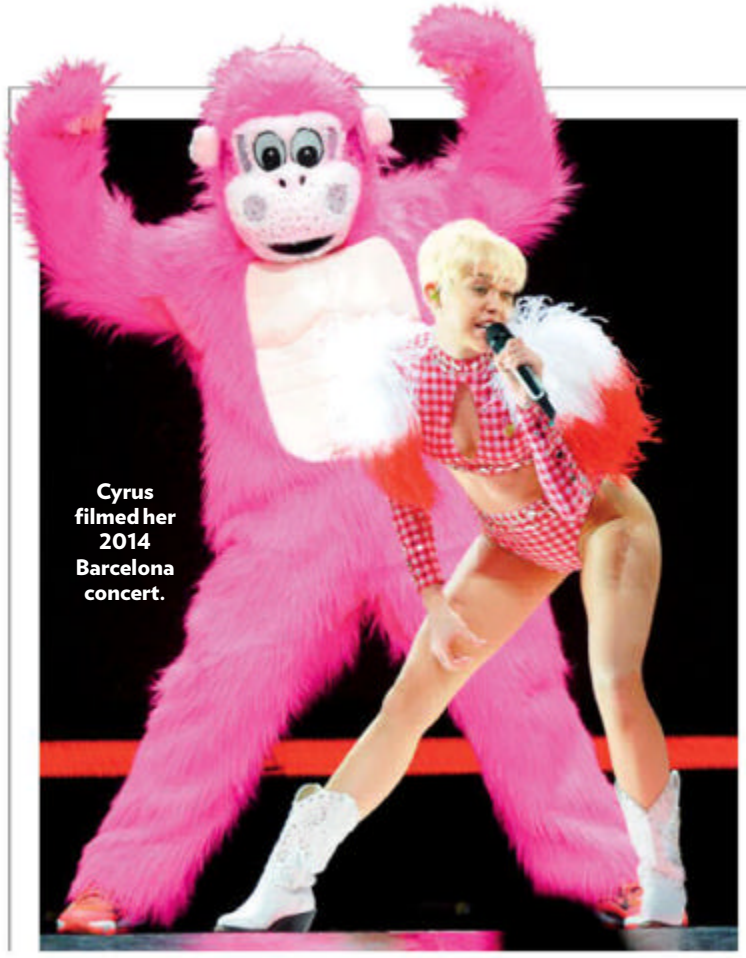

How can I get a payment? File a claim online at www.BoschSiemensWashingMachinesClassAction.com by May 28, 2015 or call 1-877-695-7474.

Who represents me? The Court has appointed Eppsteiner & Fiorica Attorneys, LLP as Lead Counsel to represent the Class in this case. You do not have to pay Class Counsel or anyone else to participate. You may hire your own lawyer to represent you at your expense.

What are my rights? You have a choice of whether to stay in the Class or not. If you submit a claim, file an objection or do nothing, you are choosing to stay in the Class, and you will be bound by the Court's decisions and the Parties' Final Settlement Agreement and Release. Any claims you may have against Bosch and Siemens relating to the Washers will be released and you will be forever barred from asserting these claims against them. If you want to keep your right to sue the Defendant yourself, you must exclude yourself from the Settlement Class by April 30, 2015. If you exclude yourself, you cannot get a payment from this Settlement. To ask to be excluded from the Class, send a letter to Bosch Siemens Washing Machines Class Action Administrator, PO Box 43340, Providence, RI 02940-3340, postmarked by April 30, 2015, stating you want to be excluded from Cobb v. BSH Home Appliances Corp., Case No. 8:10-cv-00711. Include your name, address, telephone number, and signature. If you stay in the Settlement Class, you may object to the Settlement by April 30, 2015. Visit www.BoschSiemensWashingMachinesClassAction.com for details about how to object.

The Court will hold a hearing on June 1, 2015 to consider whether to approve the Settlement, a request for attorneys' fees and expenses of up to $6.5 million and a $5,000 payment to each of the four Class Representatives. You or your own lawyer may appear at the hearing at your own expense.

No. 8 Miley Cyrus: Bangerz Tour

Try to forget her silly antics—the pop star has real talent

CONCERT DVD Like the album of the same name, Cyrus's Bangerz show is consistent in just one way: It's all over the place. She delivers on the expected frenzied spectacle—flying above the crowd on an inflatable hot dog, simulating sexual acts atop a golden car. And yes, she twerks. Still, regardless of how you feel about the Cirque de Cyrus, the former Hannah Montana's voice is no gimmick. Her party anthems are infectious fun, but Cyrus shines brightest during the pull-out-your-lighters portion of the show, with songs like "Wrecking Ball" and "Maybe You're Right" and well-chosen covers—the Dolly Parton classic "Jolene" and a countrified version of Outkast's "Hey Ya!"—anything, really, that shows off her pipes. She'll be filling arenas for years to come. (March 23)

No. 9 Barely Famous

TV COMEDY In this faux-reality series, Sara and Erin Foster, whose dad is music producer David Foster, try to conquer Hollywood by flagrantly promoting themselves. "I've never wanted to sell my soul," says Sara. "I'm open now to selling a piece of my soul." They're cute—more Cat Deeley than Chelsea Handler—and this is an ideal little vehicle. (VH1, Wednesdays, 9:30 p.m.)

No. 10 The Divergent Series: Insurgent

Shailene Woodley is back, making love and war

MOVIE ACTION/FANTASY Get ready to run. The second of four films about a dystopic society split into factions based on personality types barely gets going before lovers Tris (Woodley) and Four (Theo James) are hurled back into a war zone. They have two options: Stop a coup by Erudite boss Jeanine (icy Kate Winslet) or die trying. If Insurgent can't entirely shake off the familiarity that's perhaps inevitable in the crowded young-Orwellian field, Woodley and James have more chemistry than any pair in The Hunger Games. Plus, Miles Teller (Whiplash) is fun as Peter, the guy you can't quite trust. (March 20, PG-13)

No. 11 Into the Woods

DVD ADVENTURE Love Cinderella but still have doubts about "happily ever after"? Then take a detour into the Woods. The big-screen adaptation of Stephen Sondheim's beloved Broadway musical is funny, yes, but thorny and dark, like a patch of forest. It's also filled with great performances from Emily Blunt as the canny Baker's Wife, Anna Kendrick as Cinderella and Meryl Streep in an Oscar-nominated turn as the Witch. The DVD is packed with extras, including making-of docs, featurettes on the cast and costumes and a commentary track with director Rob Marshall. But the rarest treat is seeing Streep sing "She'll Be Back," an original Sondheim song cut from the theatrical release. On that score, at least, some wishes do come true. (March 24)

Kendrick's Cinderella had to bail on the ball.

No. 12 The Best New Books

A keenly observed memoir, a '50s coming-of-age tale and a writer's search for her family's famous ghost

EDITED BY KIM HUBBARD

Hannah Nordhaus
American Ghost

NONFICTION Julia Schuster Staab died in 1896; it's said that her ghost still haunts the Santa Fe hotel that was once her troubled family's mansion. In this intriguing book, Staab's great-great-granddaughter shares her journey to discover who her immigrant ancestor really was—and what strange alchemy made the idea of her linger long after she was gone.

Amy Scheibe
A Fireproof Home for the Bride

NOVEL Fleeing an abusive fiancé, Emmy leaves her strict Lutheran community and finds work at a paper in Fargo, N.D. There she uncovers an ugly secret that sheds new light on her family's past. Set at the dawn of the civil rights movement, Scheibe's tale captures both the heartache and the liberation of finding one's own path.

Abigail Thomas
What Comes Next and How to Like It

MEMOIR It's no wonder Abigail Thomas is leery of what lies ahead. The accident that left her husband brain-damaged was the starting point for A Three Dog Life (2006); in her new book, she experiences a romantic betrayal that will leave you gasping. Mostly, though, she writes of the changes aging brings us all and of coping through love: of family, dogs, a well-turned phrase. She is superb company.

BRUCE JENNER'S FAMILY DIVIDED

MILY'S PAIN

Now that he has told his loved ones about his transgender journey, the Olympic athlete must navigate conflicting loyalties among his large brood—even as his kids support him

We just have to get used to our new normal." So says Kim Kardashian West in the March 15 premiere of Keeping Up with the Kardashians, the E! family soap opera that just kicked off its 10th season. She was referring to the divorce of her mother, Kris Jenner, and stepfather, Bruce Jenner, after 23 years of marriage. But as is nearly always the case with the show, there is far more to the "reality" of the situation than what is captured by cameras. Consider that Bruce himself used the same phrase to describe the adjustment his 10 children and stepchildren are making since he shared the deeply personal truth he has been hiding for more than 50 years: He is transgender. Except that when the former Olympian said it, according to someone who has spent time with him lately, "he kind of joked, 'This is really a new normal.'"

There is no question that's true. In the nearly two months since Jenner, 65, made headlines around the world with the news that he is transitioning from male to female, multiple sources tell PEOPLE, his kids have been supportive, even as there has been considerable hurt on both sides surrounding the famed decathlete's life-changing decision. (In keeping with advice from experts, PEOPLE is taking its cues from Jenner's family in regard to the use of male pronouns.) "The whole family went through a rough patch," says a Kardashian insider. "It's naturally a difficult thing to process and work through."

The family dynamic had already shifted in a major way in the wake of Bruce and Kris's split (see sidebar). "The divorce caused a divide, but Bruce's decision to share his transition has caused an even greater divide," a KUWTK production source says of Bruce's plans to document his journey, both in an interview with Diane Sawyer and in a docuseries of his own. Jenner—who spends most of his time in his secluded hilltop Malibu home and described himself as "lonely" in the season premiere—addressed the strain directly, lamenting to stepdaughter

United Front
"He is a great dad, and they didn't feel the need to [ask questions about his changing appearance]," an insider says of the daughters (with Bruce in a Jan. 19 Instagram).

Kourtney, 35, "I feel so separated. The Kardashians over here, the Jenners over here. Little me in the middle. Sometimes it's a little bit tough."

Among the factions: Jenner's children from his previous marriages—Cassandra, 34, Burt, 36, Brandon, 33, and Brody, 31—who had known about the possibility of their dad's transition "for years," says a source close to them, and had just begun to repair their relationship with him after he had largely been absent during his time with Kris. "It was extremely hard for them to let him back in their lives after barely having any contact with him after he married Kris," says a close source who has spent time with them recently. "They can't believe they finally got their relationship on track, and now they have this crazy extra layer to deal with. But they are very supportive."

On the other side are his stepdaughters Kourtney, Kim, 34, and Khloé, 30, who "were the last ones let in on it all," says the Kardashian insider, adding that their relationship was already strained by the split from Kris: "There were weeks when they didn't hear from Bruce, and they all kind of felt [that Bruce] ditched them. They were just hysterical when it all really came out." The two daughters he shares with Kris, Kendall, 19, and Kylie, 17, "are having a hard time with the transition," adds the family insider. "They're very supportive, but it's just not an easy situation."

Despite more than a year of tabloid reports surrounding Bruce's transition, the insider says, there was significant denial among family members in the face of Jenner's changing appearance. "Everyone thought he was trying to feel young, that kind of thing," says the family insider. That's not an uncommon reaction among families of transgender people, says Mary Andres, a clinical psychologist and professor at the University of Southern California. "Denial usually comes first," she says, often followed by anger "connected deeply to a loss of control: 'How will I explain all of this to my friends? You are forcing me into a process I didn't choose—to come out as a partner, child or parent of a trans person.'"

It's a struggle Kris, 59, has dealt with directly. The reality-TV matriarch "just couldn't emotionally handle it all when he finally came out with it," says the family insider. "Regardless of whatever signs there were, it's a really hard pill to swallow. She truly went through a mourning period. And they don't really talk now." For his part, "Bruce feels like Kris is used to getting her own way, and going ahead with his transition was not probably part of her plans," adds the source who has spent time with him recently.

'Bruce feels he can be himself with a very small group of family and close friends' —FAMILY INSIDER

After keeping his truth a secret for more than five decades—and "taking a backseat in his own life," as the source puts it, while Kris called the shots during their marriage—the 1976 Olympic gold medalist is now going his own way for the first time in a long while. He has chosen a new name, an insider tells PEOPLE, but is not yet ready to share it, and he is proceeding at his own pace, just as experts advise. "He has learned a lot just over the past year about what transgender means," says the source. "Trans people can identify as female and still be a jock, and do all the things that are generally thought of as more masculine. It seemed reassuring to him that he could correct his gender to what it's supposed to be but not have to give up or change everything else about his life."

As he continues to find his way, he has remained firm in the belief that "he wants this to be his story," a friend says of the single star, who spends most of his days in a quiet routine of Starbucks stops, golf and time at home with close friends and family. As for the idea that he was dating one of Kris's best friends—a central plot point of the premiere of KUWTK—"it seems more like he confided in her," says the insider. "She would buy him feminine things he wanted. They had some kind of special bond."

Initially Bruce planned to document his journey with an E! series, but that plan was put on hold after he was involved in an accident on

THE FAMILY FACES OFF

TEAM BRUCE

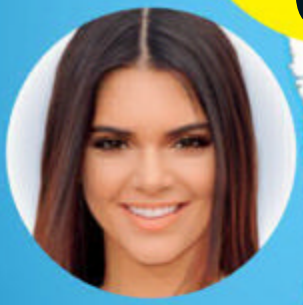

During his marriage to Kris, Jenner spent little time with his children from previous relationships. Now he's mending the gap—and they are standing firmly by their father's side

Brody Jenner, 31
In the premiere, he organizes a "Bruce on the Loose" party for his dad and says he wants to set him up with "slougars" (slutty cougars). Bruce declines.

Brandon Jenner, 33
Expecting a baby with his wife, Leah, Brandon "is the father figure," says a source who has spent time with him. "He's a guru type and very chilled."

Kendall Jenner, 19
Kendall, who has a close bond with her half brothers, was the only one of Kris's daughters to attend the "Bruce on the Loose" party.

Cassandra Jenner, 34
The first to offer her public support to her father, she has reconnected with him and told PEOPLE last year, "Whatever he wants to do, he wants to do."

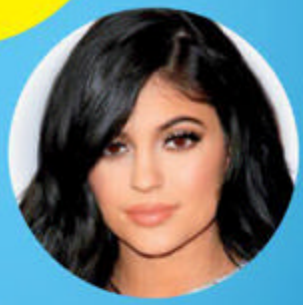

Burt Jenner, 36
In KUWTK, Burt asks Kourtney to "say goodbye" to Khloé and Rob for him at a Vegas party. "Please just tell them I love them," he says. "It is what it is."

TEAM KRIS

Her six kids—including two with Bruce—back their mom and have watched her "mourn" the husband she thought she knew. They spend less time with Bruce than in the past but continue to support him

Kim Kardashian, 34
"My mom deserves a little bit more respect than that," she said of Bruce's closeness with one of Kris's best friends in the premiere.

Kylie Jenner, 17
Unlike Kendall, Kylie was a no-show at the Malibu beach party her half siblings threw for Bruce. Still underage, she resides primarily with Mom.

Khloé Kardashian, 30
"She was emotionally hurt by Bruce" and the distance she felt after the divorce, says a family insider. She called his "date" with Kris's friend "a betrayal."

Kourtney Kardashian, 35
A source says she is least close to Bruce. With a new baby (and now boyfriend Scott Disick in rehab), "it's difficult to always keep in touch," she said.

Rob Kardashian, 28
He keeps a low profile and has remained largely separate from the drama. He isn't seen in the season premiere or at his parents' separate parties.

Feb. 7 that resulted in a fatality. (No charges have been filed; see box.) "For Bruce to decide to share his journey took a lot of psychological strength, and he acts more fragile now," says the production source.

The accident came just when Bruce was finally feeling "free," as a source previously described his new state of mind. First aware of his feelings as a young teen, for years "he had other people buy his clothes, and it was very private," says the friend. "He dressed as a woman." He was also attracted to women. "His marriages were no shams," says the friend. As each of his first two marriages—to Chrystie Crownover and Linda Thompson—was ending, Bruce sat down with his soon-to-be ex-wife and told her his true feelings. Both times, his exes were supportive, says the source who has spent time with Bruce, and both times, they encouraged him to do what would bring him happiness. But then he would "start second-guessing himself over whether it was something he really wanted," says the source, wondering whether "it was more of a transvestite thing"—dressing in women's clothing—"or a transgender thing."

The third time he married, to Kris in 1991, "he liked how in charge she was of everything—it made him feel like he didn't have to worry so much about his identity, who he was. Kris was in charge, and he was just along for the ride." Then, nearly three years ago, around the time of his son Brandon's wedding, "he just had a feeling of 'enough,'" says the source. "Enough trying to fool himself and others, enough of letting other people dictate how he was going to live."

Ultimately, that's what matters for all who care for Bruce. These days "he seems happy that he can live his life the way he feels he's intended to," says the family insider. "His kids all love him very much and would do anything for him." And Bruce returns that sentiment. "Do I think they still love me?" he said recently to the source in his circle. "Of course I do. I know they love me and will always love me."

Early Days
"They were a couple in love," a friend says of Bruce and Kris (with their brood in 1991).

CRASH UPDATE

After he was involved in a Feb. 7 accident (above) that resulted in the death of a 69-year-old driver, "Bruce would not stop talking about how upset he was," says a KUWTK production source. "He was in disbelief for weeks and was often crying. He says that as soon as he wakes up in the morning, he thinks about how someone died. He has expressed that it's a never-ending nightmare." No charges have been filed in the case, but the source says Jenner visited criminal-defense attorney Blair Berk for several hours on Feb. 11 and is concerned about a possible lawsuit. (Investigators are reportedly examining a video taken seconds after impact for clues.) Following the crash, he also began to pull back on the planned docuseries about his transition journey, but the source says his hesitations had begun earlier. "He definitely expressed concerns about filming before the accident," says the source. "However, the accident is still weighing heavily on Bruce. He seems a bit less enthusiastic about sharing his journey."

HOPE AFTER TRAGEDY

RAISING QUADRUPLETS ON MY OWN

On Jan. 16 Carlos Morales's wife, Erica, died just hours after giving birth. Now, with four babies to bring up, he is a dad on a mission: "I want to make Erica proud"

By CAITLIN KEATING

Photographs by MELANIE ACEVEDO

BUNDLES OF JOY
"Erica should be here," says Carlos (left, holding Tracy, and, inset, with Erica in 2010). "She would love every single moment of this."

INSET: COURTESY CARLOS MORALES

For a few hours, in the maternity ward of a Phoenix hospital on Jan. 15, Carlos and Erica Morales's long-held dream had come true. After years of struggling to conceive, Erica, 36, had delivered four healthy newborns. Overcome with joy, Carlos poured his heart out to his wife, not yet awake from the anesthesia she had been given for her C-section. "It was the best day of my life," Carlos says. "Nothing in my life had ever made me this happy."

Two months later, life looks nothing like what Carlos and Erica had imagined. Just eight hours after giving birth, before she could speak a word to her husband or see or hold her babies, Erica went into hypovolemic shock, an emergency condition involving massive blood loss. Doctors' efforts to revive her failed; Erica died at 1:20 a.m. on Jan. 16. With that sudden, overwhelming loss, Carlos had to rewrite the script he and Erica had lovingly fashioned for their lives as parents together—four babies splashing in the bath, family Bible readings, daily trips to the neighborhood playground behind their house. Now, even as he mourns the loss of the woman he calls "the love of my life," he has vowed to be both father and mother to their children. "I thought my world died when Erica did," says Carlos, 29, a soft-spoken warehouse supervisor who has been on leave from his job. "But every second I am with my babies I know she is still with me. I not only see Erica in each of them, I feel her. I feel her soul and her presence. These babies don't know yet what blessings they have given me. They have given me four reasons to live."

'I have to do this for Erica. We are still in this together' —CARLOS MORALES

What the four—Carlos Jr., identical twins Erica and Paisley, and Tracy—haven't given their dad is a moment's rest since the last two came home from the hospital March 11. A day later, Carlos is a blur of motion. Sitting on the couch, with a baseball game on television, he rocks Paisley to sleep in one arm while giving a bottle to Carlos Jr. with the other. A few minutes later he passes Paisley to a family friend and dashes to the kitchen, carrying Carlos Jr., to get formula from the refrigerator. In the background Tracy and Erica are crying in their bassinets. "I can only see as far as the next feeding and the next diaper change," Carlos says. "I take it minute by minute, or it's too overwhelming."

But the single dad is not alone. He's surrounded by a tight-knit circle of family and friends eager to help. At the center is Sondra Bridges, 56, Erica's mother. When Erica learned she was pregnant with quadruplets, she asked Bridges to move in. Now Bridges, who has been living at the couple's home since December, is on 24-hour baby duty, waking every three hours along with Carlos. Together the two are keeping Erica's memory alive. "I tell [the babies] stories of their mother," Bridges says, "and how they wanted them for so long."

For Carlos and Erica, who met at salsa night at a Scottsdale, Ariz., nightclub in 2006, a family was always the dream. Married in Las Vegas in 2007, they started trying for a baby two years later. It didn't work, and after IVF, Erica suffered a devastating miscarriage. When they got the news that she was pregnant again, this time with quads, "we couldn't believe it," Carlos says. "Not one, two, three, but four. We didn't think about how expensive it was going to be, the space issues, child care. We were just so happy." Erica, a real estate agent, was determined to do everything right. She kept detailed lists on her iPad, from what she ate to goals for the babies' future: college, good jobs, church and learning both English and Spanish.

They had chosen all but one of the babies' names when Erica went into the hospital at 31 weeks pregnant and her doctor determined it was time to deliver them. "We can decide after

TRUE LOVE "She was so beautiful. She never stopped smiling," Carlos says of Erica (left, on their wedding day, and, right, a week before she gave birth). "I was the luckiest man in the world."

IT TAKES A VILLAGE

1. "My heart breaks all day long," says Bridges (holding Erica). 2. Diaper duty, with help from family and friends. 3. "These kids will dominate the monkey bars. I know they will," a proud dad declares. 4. "I know Erica is proud of you, Carlos," Bridges told him on March 14. 5. "We see Erica in every single one of those babies' faces," says friend Christina Todman. "They even have her attitude and long legs."

she's born," Carlos recalls Erica telling him. Hours later—after a team of doctors and nurses swarmed Erica's room with a crash cart, after Carlos paced the hall frantically once the Code Blue was called, after he found out the tragic news—Carlos sat by his newborns in the pediatric intensive-care unit. A nurse asked him for their names. He told her the three they'd chosen: Carlos Jr., Paisley, Tracy. He paused and then named the fourth himself: Erica.

The tragic story of the quads' birth generated international headlines and an outpouring of support. Erica's childhood friend Nicole Todman created a GoFundMe page (gofundme.com/kbkpag) that has raised in excess of $360,000 from more than 10,000 strangers. "To think that so many people are giving me whatever they can afford," Carlos says. "I'm so grateful." All of this helps Carlos stay strong. As he eases back into work this week, he celebrates signs of progress: Three babies now weigh 5 lbs. each, and one weighs 6; he is a master diaper changer; he knows if a cry is for a bottle or a cuddle. Holding Paisley, he looks out at the playground and thinks about something he finally can see again: the future. "They will get on that school bus and play on that playground. They will be happy, healthy and loved. I will do everything in my power to make that happen." ●

Jane the Virgin's Gina Rodriguez

HER BIG BREAK

THE GOLDEN GLOBE WINNER OPENS UP ABOUT HER SURPRISE SUCCESS. 'IT'S TAKEN A LONG TIME TO GET WHERE I AM TODAY'

By PATRICK GOMEZ

"The biggest risk I took was deciding to spend my lifetime going after my dream," says Rodriguez.

BRIGITTE SIRE

When Gina Rodriguez heard her name being called at the Golden Globe Awards in January, she couldn't believe it. It wasn't just that she'd won for Best Actress in a TV Comedy for portraying the lead in the CW hit Jane the Virgin. It was also the sight of Oprah Winfrey suddenly cheering for her. "I was like, 'Oh sh--. It's Oprah!'" she says. "And seeing Meryl Streep when I was standing there was just outrageous." Rodriguez, 30, says the award is still sitting in a box on her TV stand because she hasn't quite processed her newfound success. "I feel like I need a year to go by because it is still so crazy…everything leading up to this has just been quite the journey."

Her First Love

The youngest of three daughters born to native Puerto Ricans Magali and Gino, Rodriguez was raised in Chicago and says she always knew she wanted to perform. "There was just something about being in front of people, making them laugh and even cry, that made me feel like I was flying," she says. But before acting came along, she thought her real calling was salsa dancing: "When I was 6 years old, I saw this dance group of little girls in sequin dresses dancing salsa. I was like, 'I want to be in those sequin dresses!'" Throughout school she performed with dance companies around the country before heading to New York University for acting.

Her Inspiration

"Growing up, I had these fierce women in my life who were kicking ass, but I never saw them represented onscreen," says Rodriguez, whose mom rose through the ranks of the Cook County Court from secretary to director of interpreters. Her dad is a prominent representative for the Teamsters, her sister Ivelisse is an investment banker, and her sister Rebecca is a doctor, and yet "the [role models I saw on TV] weren't ever the color of myself or my siblings," she says. "I realized: Changing that is my mission."

Her Inner Confidence

"I always knew I'd have a different journey because I didn't look like the stereotypical leading lady or the supersexy Latina," says Rodriguez. "But my parents encouraged my sisters and me to have confidence in who we are. So, working in an industry where I am constantly told, 'You're not skinny, tall or ethnic enough,' I'd be like, 'Maybe I'm not skinny enough for this role, but I do just fine in real life.'" Her boyfriend, actor Henri Esteve, agrees. "He's my partner in crime and super-supportive," she says. Now, with Jane coming back for a second season, the possibilities for Rodriguez are endless. "I'm writing a book, and I started a production company," she says, "and hopefully a family will come—but there's no rush!" ●

GINA'S RISE TO FAME

2010 ARMY WIVES
Rodriguez guest-starred as domestic-violence survivor Marisol Evans in three episodes of the Lifetime drama.

2011 HAPPY ENDINGS
The actress showed off her more conniving side as Casey Wilson's assistant on the ABC sitcom.

2014 JANE THE VIRGIN
"It's been an amazing ride," Rodriguez says of her hit CW dramedy.

2015 GOLDEN GLOBES
"My sister fought them for my one ticket," Rodriguez says of taking Ivelisse as her date instead of her boyfriend, Henri Esteve (left), or her parents (below).

JAMES CORDEN

Man of the (Midnight) Hour

THE ACTOR AND NEW HOST OF THE LATE LATE SHOW IS READY TO BRING THE PARTY BACK TO TELEVISION

Being tapped to replace Craig Ferguson as the new host of The Late Late Show has taken British actor James Corden to new heights—literally. "They had me stand on top of a billboard, yelling things from a bullhorn," he says of recently shooting a promo for the show, which premieres March 23 on CBS. "It was a great view. But it was very hot!" Things are only just heating up for Corden, 36, who starred as the Baker in the Oscar-nominated Into the Woods in December and has long been a television star in the U.K. "This is just not something I ever thought would come my way," he says of the hosting gig. "I've never interviewed anyone before, so I'm using every opportunity [to practice]. Every time I get in an Uber, I treat the driver as though he's a guest." The native of High Wycombe ("This tiny town most Brits haven't even heard of, let alone Americans") has now uprooted his wife, Julia, son Max, 4, and daughter Carey, 5 months, for life in L.A. "But this was an opportunity we just had to take," Corden says. "I owe it to everyone we left behind to give it everything I've got." And it's not as though it's exactly tough living. "The other day we just drove around for two hours and ended up going all the way up past Malibu. It was just so beautiful. We kept saying to each other, 'I can't believe we're here.'" —PATRICK GOMEZ

'It's not lost on me what a privilege this is. I hope we find our audience'

"I have a wonderful wife," Corden says of balancing a new show and a new baby.

SHARK TANK'S ROBERT HERJAVEC

'I Just Wanted to End It'

AFTER HIS MARRIAGE FELL APART, THE MULTIMILLIONAIRE REVEALS, HE WAS DRIVEN TO THE BRINK OF SUICIDE. THEN HE FOUND NEW PURPOSE BY JOHNNY DODD

Robert Herjavec seemed to have it all: a lucrative business empire bolstered by his role on ABC's hit show Shark Tank, a garage full of Ferraris at his multimillion-dollar Toronto mansion and a picture-perfect family. But privately his world was crashing down. After 24 years of marriage, he and wife Diane Plese legally separated last June. Upset by the split, his three children, Caprice, 17, Skye, 18, and Brendan, 21, initially refused to speak to him, Herjavec says, and he was so devastated he stood on his balcony and contemplated jumping. "I've always thought that there is nothing that can rock my world, but I woke up one night and wanted to end it," he says. "All I could think was, 'I can't go on.'"

After several dark, trying months, Herjavec pulled himself back from the brink. One of the contestants on the new season of Dancing with the Stars, the tech mogul, 51, says he emerged from his crisis "stronger, more empathetic and more balanced." The key to his recovery, he says, was working at a Seattle homeless shelter for 2½ weeks, spending his nights on the streets helping the destitute. His pastor, John McAuley, a Congregational minister, urged him to go. "This place saved me, man," says Herjavec, opening up to PEOPLE as he headed to a homeless encampment under a highway overpass on a recent return trip to volunteer. "I always think, 'What was the purpose of all this pain?' I think this gave me the opportunity to reconnect with God and to help others. The way I was was unsustainable." Adds McAuley: "Robert was in need. Little did I realize the profound effect this would have on him."

"I'd always thought nothing could rock my world," says Herjavec (on Shark Tank).

Neither did Herjavec, a self-confessed "fanatically driven" businessman whose Croatian family arrived in Canada in 1970 "with a suitcase and $20" after fleeing the former Yugoslavia, where his father had been jailed 22 times for criticizing Communism. The first in his family to learn English, Herjavec, an only child, grew up "poor and with a big chip on my shoulder." But after offering to work for an ex-IBM exec for nothing to get his start, he earned a fortune creating and selling tech companies. With a personal net worth reported at more than $100 million, he wrote bestselling business books and gained fame judging contestants' start-up ideas on Shark Tank. "I always felt like the underdog, and that made me highly motivated," he says. "Not to buy more stuff. I just wanted to be the best I can be."

Herjavec was unprepared for the fallout after he and his wife separated last summer. "Things weren't good for a while," he says. "We were great parents and a great team, but we weren't great for each other. I should have had the courage to leave sooner, but I didn't because of my kids." (Plese couldn't be reached for comment.) Herjavec insists he isn't worried about financial repercussions (see box). "It's just money," he says. "The thought of not speaking to my kids hit me hard. They were upset. They sided with their mom."

He spiraled into despondency. "I would go to sleep and wake up in the middle of the night screaming," he says. "When I called my pastor, I said,

What's at Stake

A 50,000-sq.-ft. Toronto mansion, a fleet of Ferraris, a fortune reportedly topping $100 million—there's a lot on the line in his divorce, but in Canada property and assets are split equally between spouses. "There's more than enough for both of us," says Herjavec (right, with Plese in 2013).

'I will not survive until tomorrow.'"

Herjavec was an emotional wreck when he arrived at Seattle's Union Gospel Mission in July and was quickly put to work in the soup kitchen, then later aiding homeless people on the streets. "Nobody knew who I was," he says. "People thought I was a recovering addict. I didn't trust myself to be alone."

His personal pain was slowly eclipsed by compassion for the people he met. "The guiding principle is you have no judgment and nothing but love in your heart," he says. "Think how different that is from Shark Tank—which is nothing but judgment! I always used to think that if you are that compassionate, you are weak." He still volunteers at the shelter whenever he can and helps support it financially, at one point buying all of a local Walmart's inventory of socks to hand out.

Herjavec and a Union Gospel Mission worker helping the homeless in Seattle in February.

'Everybody has their kryptonite. For me it was my kids'

After falling so low, he also no longer feels "bulletproof." And it's this newfound sense of vulnerability that inspired him to "move out of my comfort zone" and compete on Dancing with the Stars, a show he first got hooked on while watching it with his mother, Katica, in the hospital as she battled the ovarian cancer that claimed her life in 2007. "She loved the pageantry of it," says Herjavec, who has been practicing eight hours a day. "He's got more energy than anyone I've ever met," says his dance partner, Kym Johnson. "He's laser-focused."

Has one of TV's best-known sharks lost his bite? Hardly. But his stints on the streets of Seattle have helped him make "peace" with the pain that almost pushed him over the edge. "It doesn't make it any easier, but I have a lot of faith in the future now," he says, adding, "I was hollow and broken, and these people saved my life. And for that I'll always be grateful." ●

BEHIND THE SCENES

The Sound of Music Turns 50!

The hills are alive—forever! Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer share memories of making the classic movie musical

A Little Direction

"He was a darling guy," says Andrews of director Robert Wise (on-set with the children). "You can tell he's adorable. And little Kym [Karath], who's so young. Well, we all were."

CLOCKWISE FROM LEFT: MPTV; EVERETT; TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX HOME ENTERTAINMENT(5)

A Star in the Making
Andrews checked her makeup between takes. The actress wasn't megafamous yet, as Mary Poppins hadn't hit theaters. "I was so green!" she says.

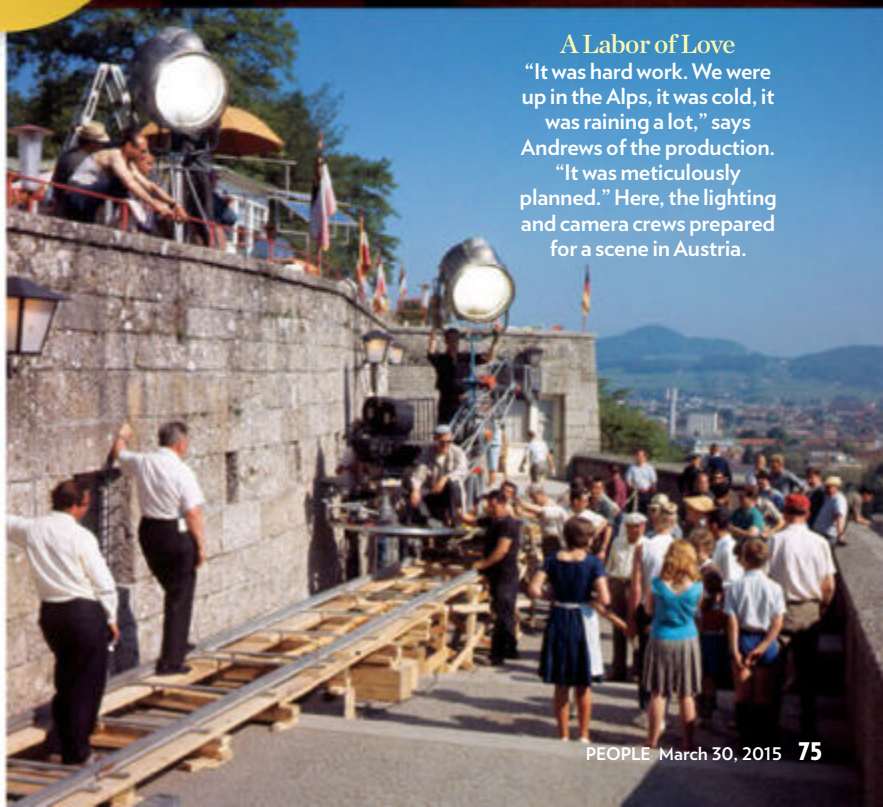

Here Comes the Bride
"That dress was exquisite," says Andrews of Maria's gown. "It was shot in the abbey and on the soundstage—the walk across the courtyard was Hollywood, and the actual church was Salzburg [Austria]."

The Role of a Lifetime
Andrews "clowning around" out of costume. "I never could have guessed the movie would be this iconic," she says.

Sisterhood On-Set
Karath took a break with Charmian Carr. Andrews was surprised "how quickly the cast bonded as a family. We're still that family."

A Labor of Love
"It was hard work. We were up in the Alps, it was cold, it was raining a lot," says Andrews of the production. "It was meticulously planned." Here, the lighting and camera crews prepared for a scene in Austria.

'How Lucky Can a Girl Get?'

Like the governess she played in The Sound of Music, Julie Andrews needed to win over seven young people. On the first day of shooting, "I wanted to make the kids feel as much at home as possible," the star, 79, tells PEOPLE. Andrews had just played the title character in Mary Poppins, "so they asked me if I could sing 'Supercalifragilistic,' and I did," she recalls. "Then they asked me to sing it backward, which I did. They loved it."

Andrews's soaring soprano and twinkling charisma propelled the musical to a Best Picture Oscar—and, following her own Best Actress win for Mary Poppins a year earlier, cemented her Hollywood superstar status at the age of 29. "I think people assume I chose [to play Maria], but I wasn't in a position to do that," she says, noting that before Sound of Music, she was best known as a stage performer. "They asked me, and then I became a part of history," she marvels. "How lucky can a girl get?"

Following the film's massive success—its anniversary is being celebrated with a new Blu-ray and DVD edition and a return to theaters in April—Andrews earned a third Oscar nod for 1982's Victor Victoria, directed by her husband, Blake Edwards. (They were married 41 years until his death in 2010.) She also focused on her family life, raising five children. "Being a mum," she told PEOPLE in 2012, "always seemed to me like putting in pieces of the puzzle that you never quite knew."

The actress faced one of the biggest personal and professional challenges of her life in 1997, when a botched throat surgery permanently took her famed four-octave singing voice. "I thought at the time my voice was what I am—and it is to some extent," she says, "but it seems it's not all that I am." These days, she writes children's books with her daughter Emma Walton Hamilton—"I seem to be busier than I've ever been"—and she savored the warm reception she received at the Oscars' Sound of Music tribute alongside Lady Gaga last month. "Lady Gaga hit it out of the ballpark," she says. Overall, "it's a lovely time in my life. I have gorgeous grandchildren and a home I adore. I don't think things could be better than that."

The Kids Then & Now THE SOUND OF MUSIC'S YOUNG STARS, ALL GROWN UP

"They were great kids. And they are great friends to this day," says Andrews of her onscreen charges. Learning to 'Respect' His Role

Christopher Plummer, now 85, admits that for years he was a bit "thankless" about having played Captain von Trapp. "I didn't think the part was the greatest ever written," says Plummer, who won an Oscar for Beginners in 2012. But he now has "a great respect for it. It's a terrific picture of its time." And he enjoyed more than the crisp apple strudels. His fondest memory: "getting to know Austria and getting to know some Austrian girls—they're very beautiful!"

My American Dream

GREAT SUCCESS AGAINST ALL ODDS

MAKING BILLIONS FROM BEANS

HOWARD SCHULTZ / CEO, Starbucks Coffee Company

GROWING UP IN A BROOKLYN HOUSING PROJECT INSPIRED THE SELF-MADE ENTREPRENEUR TO FOLLOW HIS PASSION—AND CREATE A COFFEE EMPIRE THAT'S VENTI-SIZE

Schultz (in a N.Y.C. store and in 1956) fell in love with coffee at age 9. "I remember the smell was so extraordinary," he says.

Life in Brooklyn's Bayview housing projects wasn't easy. Though his father worked as a truck driver, Howard Schultz started helping support the family at age 12 by taking on a series of odd jobs. "I had a lot of shame as a boy because I was a poor kid," he says. "I carry that vulnerability today. But I'm also proud to have come from there. I was imprinted with this work ethic and understanding the value of a dollar because we didn't have any."

Today, Schultz, 61, has plenty, having turned a small chain of Seattle coffee stores called Starbucks into a billion-dollar business with nearly 22,000 stores worldwide.

Key to His Success: "Education," says Schultz, who got his degree in communications from Northern Michigan University in 1975. Though his parents were high school dropouts, Schultz's mom insisted he attend college. "She drilled into me that our station in life was not going to define us."

Lessons Learned Schultz says he's grateful for growing up in racially diverse public housing. "It gave me the self-confidence to get along in the world. We all had to get along in that building, and we did. Color wasn't an issue."

Paying It Forward: His new "Race Together" initiative is a program aimed at starting honest conversation about race in the United States. "It's all about inclusion," he says. "The American dream has to stay alive for everybody."

DANIEL HOLZMAN & MICHAEL CHERNOW

Spicy Pork Meatballs

THE OWNERS OF THE MEATBALL SHOP IN NEW YORK CITY SERVED THIS CROWD-PLEASING DISH AT THE 2015 SOUTH BEACH WINE & FOOD FESTIVAL

- 2 tbsp. extra-virgin olive oil
- 4 slices white bread, pulsed into crumbs in food processor
- 4 jarred hot cherry peppers, finely chopped
- ¼ cup hot cherry pepper pickling liquid from the jar
- 1 large egg
- 2 lbs. ground pork
- 1 tbsp. plus 1 tsp. kosher salt
- Chopped parsley for garnish

1. Preheat the oven to 450°. Drizzle olive oil into a 9x13-in. baking dish and use your hands to coat the entire surface. Set aside.
2. In a large mixing bowl, combine the bread crumbs, pickling liquid and egg. Let sit for 5 minutes so the bread can absorb the liquid. Add the ground pork, salt and cherry peppers, then mix by hand until thoroughly incorporated.
3. Roll the mixture into about 20 round, golf-ball-size meatballs (about 1½ in.), packing the meat firmly. Place the balls in the prepared baking dish: Line them up snugly and evenly in vertical and horizontal rows to form a grid. The meatballs should be touching one another.
4. Roast for 20 minutes, or until the meatballs are firm and cooked through. A meat thermometer inserted into the center of a meatball should read 165°.
5. Remove from oven and allow the meatballs to cool for 5 minutes in the baking dish. Sprinkle with parsley. Serve with your favorite tomato sauce over pasta or polenta.

Makes: 18 to 20 meatballs Prep time: 20 minutes Cook time: 20 minutes

Cheesy Eggplant Lasagna

JOHN BONGIOVI SR.—FOUNDER OF BONGIOVI PASTA SAUCES AND, YES, JON BON JOVI'S DAD!—SHARES A BELOVED FAMILY RECIPE

- 8 large eggs, divided
- 2 (1-lb.) eggplants, peeled and sliced lengthwise ¼-in. thick
- 1 (15-oz.) container Italian-style bread crumbs
- 1 cup each vegetable oil and olive oil, divided
- 1 lb. cremini mushrooms, sliced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 3 tbsp. chopped fresh oregano, divided
- Salt and black pepper
- 1 tbsp. chopped fresh thyme, divided
- 2 lbs. ricotta cheese
- 1 cup grated Parmesan cheese, divided
- 1 (10-oz.) box frozen chopped spinach, thawed and squeezed dry
- 2 (24-oz.) jars marinara sauce
- 1 (8-oz.) package shredded mozzarella
- Fresh basil leaves

1. Preheat oven to 400°. Beat 5 eggs in a bowl. Dip sliced eggplant into eggs, then bread crumbs, to coat thoroughly.

2. In a large skillet on medium high, heat ½ cup vegetable oil and ½ cup olive oil. Add 3 to 4 eggplant slices and cook until browned, about 2 minutes per side. Transfer to a paper-towel-lined plate to absorb excess oil. Repeat until half the slices have been cooked, then discard oil and wipe pan with paper towels. Heat remaining 1 cup oil and cook remaining eggplant in batches.

3. In a skillet, sauté the sliced mushrooms in 1 tbsp. olive oil until soft, about 7 minutes. Add garlic, 1 tbsp. oregano, 1 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. pepper and ½ tbsp. thyme. Cook for another 2 minutes, then set aside to cool.

4. In a large bowl, thoroughly mix ricotta cheese, 3 eggs, ½ cup grated Parmesan, spinach, the mushroom mixture and remaining oregano and thyme.

5. Spread 1 cup marinara sauce in a 9x13-in. baking dish. Layer a third of the eggplant slices on top, overlapping the pieces slightly. Add half the ricotta mixture and then 1 cup marinara sauce on top. Repeat with another layer of eggplant, ricotta and sauce.

6. Top with final layer of eggplant and 2 cups marinara sauce. Sprinkle with shredded mozzarella and remaining ½ cup of Parmesan.

7. Cover with aluminum foil coated with cooking spray, and bake for 1 hour. Remove foil and continue baking for an additional 15 minutes, or until sauce is bubbling and cheese is melted.

8. Remove pan from oven and let rest for 15 minutes before serving. Sprinkle with basil leaves, cut into squares, and serve.

Serves: 6 to 8
Prep Time: 30 minutes

Pasta with Roasted Cauliflower

THE CUTTHROAT KITCHEN HOST AND STAR OF THE ALTON BROWN LIVE! FOOD TOUR SERVES UP A HEARTY MEAL

ALTON BROWN

- 1 large head of cauliflower, broken into bite-size pieces
- 2 tbsp. extra-virgin olive oil
- 4 tsp. kosher salt, divided
- 1 can whole tomatoes, drained
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- ½ tsp. red pepper flakes
- ½ lb. penne or rigatoni pasta
- ⅓ cup Parmesan cheese
- 1 cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese
- ½ cup bread crumbs
- 2 tbsp. parsley, chopped

1. Preheat oven to 400°. In a cast iron skillet, toss the cauliflower with oil and 1 tsp. salt, and roast in the oven for 20 minutes or until cauliflower softens and browns slightly.

2. Remove skillet from oven and place over medium heat. Stir in tomatoes, garlic and red pepper flakes. Stir, breaking up the tomatoes as they soften. Once most of the tomato liquid has cooked out, about 5 minutes, remove from heat.

3. To prepare the pasta, drop the uncooked penne into a large saucepan. Fill the pan with enough cold water to just cover the pasta by 1 in. Stir in remaining salt and place over high heat, stirring occasionally. When water comes to a boil, reduce heat to a simmer and continue stirring every few minutes until the pasta feels done, about 6 minutes.

4. Transfer the cooked pasta to the skillet, reserving the pasta water. Stir the pasta into the cauliflower mixture, then add ¼ cup of the pasta water. Stir in Parmesan and cheddar cheeses, and top with the bread crumbs.

5. Return the skillet to the oven and cook another 15 minutes or until the cheese is melted and the bread crumbs are golden brown. Remove and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Cool for 5 minutes before serving.

Serves: 4 to 6 Prep time: 20 minutes Cook time: 45 minutes

Alton Debunks 4 Food Myths

ALCOHOL 'COOKS OUT' OF FOODS

"Alcohol does have a boiling point below that of water and, yes, you can cook some of it out. But you can never cook it all away because alcohol bonds tightly to water."

BUTTER MUST BE REFRIGERATED

"America is one of the only culinary cultures that stashes butter in the chill chest. Most butters do just as well if kept in a covered butter dish at room temperature."

MICROWAVES DESTROY NUTRIENTS

"Most nutrients are more damaged by long cooking times or are washed away by cooking water, both of which can be avoided by careful microwaving."

SEARING MEAT 'SEALS IN JUICES'

"Nope. Any type of heat causes liquid to evaporate! But that doesn't mean you shouldn't sear meat, as the chemical reactions involved create a lot of unique flavors."

HOW TO WEAR... FRINGE & CULOTTES

These potentially tricky trends will be everywhere this spring. Intimidated? Perpetual fashion pioneer Olivia Palermo is here to help! Check out her perfectly on-point (of course!) demos below as proof that, when done right, any look can go from runway to real way.

Watch Your Waist
A sleek silhouette reads modern, not costumey.

Start Small
A clutch is a sophisticated (and easy!) way to try the trend.

Stay Neutral
Understated accessories are key to avoiding visual clutter.

Turn Down the Volume
Tuck in a streamlined top if you're going big on bottom.

Add Structure
Flowy pants benefit from the contrast. Too warm for a coat? Try a blazer.

Elevate the Look
Skip straps and flats: Simple pumps give a leg-lengthening effect.

The actress, 46, stars in two films: Insurgent and While We're Young, both in theaters now

Last family vacation
We went skiing in Aspen. The first time with little ones is pretty horrific getting in and out of the equipment, but now my kids [Samuel, 6, and Alexander, 7] know how to do it, so it's great. I'm happy on the bunny slopes [laughs].

Last pet peeve
When someone steals your car spot! I'm more inclined to fight for my spot. That's more my style because on principle you cannot take it [from me]. But sometimes you might get someone a bit scary, and then I back down.

Last mess I cleaned up
Gosh, every morning, every night. I can't see dirty dishes in the sink from the night before. I've always been like that. Growing up, I spent a lot of my childhood living with my grandmother, and we all had to do our bit.

Last person I complimented
[My partner] Liev [Schreiber] this morning. We had a really nice dinner last night. We're not a couple that makes every Friday [date night]. We do it when we can, and it's nice.

Last thing I cooked
I do roast chicken a lot. I sear it a little bit on each side on a high heat on the stove for a very short amount of time, and it's extra tasty. The secret is the smaller the bird, the tastier it is.
